LEADING THE WAY TO A HEALTHIER COMMUNITY

Aging Month

According to a national survey released by the American Academy of Ophthalmology, nearly two out of three American adults report having eye or vision problems. A significant percentage of them, however, fail to seek medical attention in the form of regular, sight-saving eye exams. In observance of Healthy Aging Month in September, Hocking Valley Community Hospital joins the American Academy of Ophthalmology in emphasizing the importance of having regular eye exams to maintain healthy eyes and vision.

Some of the more common age-related eye diseases include age-related macular degeneration, cataract, diabetic retinopathy and glaucoma. Early detection and treatment of these conditions can help to save sight before vision loss occurs. Ophthalmologists – the physicians that specialize in medical and surgical eye care – recommend a dilated comprehensive eye exam as the best way to prevent these conditions from becoming debilitating.

Findings showed that 64 percent of adults had at least one or more of the following issues with their eyes or vision:

- difficulty seeing at night;
- blurry vision;
- reading up close;
- flashes of light;
- red, watery eyes; and,
- double vision.

Despite experiencing some level of impairment, only 13 percent admitted they had been seen by an ophthalmologist.

A healthy adult get a baseline eye exam at age 40, even if they have no history of eye problems or eye disease. Those who have chronic conditions, such as diabetes or high blood pressure, may require more frequent exams.

For more information, schedule an appointment with your optometrist. HVCH also offers an ophthalmology clinic to help individuals with cataracts. To learn about HVCH's ophthalmology clinic, call 740-380-8129.

Direct to You: From Stacey Gabriel

Fall is my favorite time of year, especially when it comes to sports. We have a daughter playing Varsity soccer and a son playing JV and Varsity football... two of my favorites to watch. I was particularly excited about this year's soccer season because this group of girls has been playing together for several years now.

You could see them starting to really get into a groove at the end of the season last year, and we knew the majority of these girls would be returning this season. They have transformed the culture of the team into a supportive and nurturing one, offering words of encouragement both on and off the field.

You have the older girls passing on their experience to the younger ones in an effort to continue building the program. Spectators are definitely witness to their ability to work together and the fact that they have won 2, tied 2, and only lost 2 is a testament to their dedication to their craft.

These girls are having the season of all seasons and it has been fun to watch. I see many similarities to how we support one another at HVCH. Our culture has been one that has undergone a transformation over the years, and I watch how we continue to learn and grow together.

This is such an exciting time to be a part of Hocking Valley Community Hospital. I am encouraged by the strides that are being made to turn the tide on the finances and excited about what that means for our future. Any time you implement an electronic health record, the finances take a hit. We've seen this same scenario play out in organizations all around us. What we know about the employees of HVCH, is that we are strong and resilient. We aren't afraid to work hard, and that is evident. The improvement in the finances didn't happen by chance. It happens when the employees do what they do best and it's what keeps patients coming back to us for care.

I know that each one of us has seen an article or news story that references the closing of a rural hospital. What I am encouraged by is that rural healthcare is finally getting the attention it deserves from those who are responsible for making rules and policy changes that impact healthcare organizations. Some things are just out of our control, but we continue to do our best to adapt to those changes. We have worked hard to get our story in front of those who need to hear it. Recently I had the honor of being included in a meeting with Congressman Steve Stivers. I had the opportunity to share with him just how important it is for rural hospitals to have a place in their communities, and the poor health outcomes that are the result if those hospitals close. We are often faced with hardships that the larger healthcare organizations do not even notice.

We are making great things happen at HVCH. Sometimes that means making tough decisions. My promise to you is that the goal is to ensure that HVCH is here to meet the needs of this community long after we have all retired. As we are planning for 2020, there are some great things on the horizon. Will it be easy? Nothing in healthcare is anymore. But we do it because we love it. And that's what keeps us going.
